

LAYS THE BLAME ON ROOSEVELT

Senator Foraker Makes Sensational Address at Banquet of Buckeye Society.

APPLAUSE FROM DINERS

PADLOCK SUGGESTED FOR THE MUCK-RAKERS.

New York, Feb. 1.—Six hundred sons of the Buckeye state, residents of New York City, attended the twenty-second annual banquet of the Ohio Society of New York tonight in the ball room of the Waldorf-Astoria. The speakers were United States Senators Joseph B. Foraker, Leroy D. Tolman, president of the Ohio Society of Chicago, Judson Harmon of Cincinnati, John D. Archbold, vice president of the Standard Oil company, and Judge Robert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation.

John J. McCook, president of the society, who acted as toastmaster, read a letter of regret from Governor Hughes. The name of Governor Hughes was greeted with prolonged applause and a general business distrust and alarm.

Due to Muck-Raking. Senator Foraker, speaking of the industrial situation, said that just now it is unsatisfactory. He spoke of the great number of idle men, the unemployed, saying that approximately 300,000 freight cars are standing idle, and more than 20,000 unemployed men are waiting for work. The chief cause for the present situation, he said, might be summed up in the one word "muck-raking." A regular crusade had been started, he said, against, not only the wrong doers, but the innocent also, and the disease was infectious and it had spread to congress and all the state legislatures.

Voice of President Heard. "In the midst of all and over all, was heard the voice of the president. Conceding that he meant well, his denunciation of predatory wealth, swollen fortunes, the criminality of the trusts and the bad corporations, were of such declamatory and frightening character that they not only increased the general dissatisfaction, but helped to create a general business distrust and alarm. He himself recognizing the fact, freely admitted that a mere statement from him that he was determined to punish and break up any kind of an offense was enough to start a run on the banks. It was not so bad, as he thus indicated, but it was bad enough, the effect being to increase the general dissatisfaction. The decline commenced. In less than twelve months it amounted to the average of more than 33 1-3 per cent of all railroad, industrial and other stocks, a grand aggregate of more than $5,000,000,000.

Crash Finally Came. "Finally the crash came. All the king's army and all the king's navies, were helpless and powerless in the presence of the widespread disasters that threatened, the criminality of the trusts and the bad corporations of wealth came to the rescue and, to the great relief of the whole country, stemmed the tide, calmed the excitement, restored order. Since then muck-rakers have been at a discount. A more wholesome sentiment prevails.

"One of the most significant evidences of improvement in the public mind as well as in the conduct of the government, is the fact that the president's message of yesterday, although it caused some alarm and proved to the contrary, did not prevent congress, yet, instead of producing a bad effect on values, seemed to stimulate the market, and to the fact that the whole country realizes that as the months pass and the end draws near, and still the republicans are correspondingly more independent, while the power of the chief executive as constant wanes."

Padlock Is Advised. Senator Foraker closed by saying: "Finally, it would be most fortunate if a padlock could be provided for the muck-rakers, all of them, high and low, big and little, well intentioned and otherwise. For it is high time to stop the slandering of the American people."

The discussion of party politics should not be introduced on such an occasion, but I trust I may without impropriety express the belief that if, in addition to what has been said, the president will be content and proud, as any man might well be, to execute plain, old-fashioned republican policies, instead of his own, our prosperity will not only come again, but permanently abide with us.

John D. Archbold ably defended the Standard Oil company, which he declared, was one of the greatest of the world's business concerns. "It has," he said, "been a blessing, not a bane to the country. He expressed for John D. Rockefeller the latter's regrets at not being able to attend the dinner, and of Mr. Rockefeller, said:

"When his career is closed and is judged dispassionately it will be written of him that he was not only one of the greatest business geniuses, but one of the greatest philanthropists of his day."

Archbold provoked applause when he said that Ohio comes to the front with two thoroughly equipped unobjectionable candidates, Senator Foraker and Secretary Taft, for the presidency.

OLDEST CHURCH MEMBER

Mrs. Mary T. Peck, Having That Distinction, Dies at Provo—Joined Church in 1837.

Provo, Jan. 30.—Mrs. Mary T. Peck, the oldest member of the Mormon church, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Graham, at 2 o'clock this afternoon after being an invalid for sixteen years. During this entire time she had been at the home of Mrs. Graham, where the excellent care she received did much to prolong her life.

Mrs. Peck was born, Feb. 14, 1816, in Dutchess county, New York, and joined the Mormon church in March, 1837. Later she went to Nauvoo, where she met Joseph Smith and became well acquainted with him. In 1844, she married Martin H. Peck. They crossed the plains together in the early days and settled in Salt Lake City. Her husband died over twenty years ago and since then she has lived with her daughter here in Provo. Three children survive her, Mrs. J. C. Graham, Mrs. Susie Taylor of Salt Lake, and M. H. Peck, living in Idaho. Mr. Peck was notified of his wife's condition, but has not reached here yet.

The funeral services will be held at the Graham residence at 10 o'clock Sunday morning.

HIS FAILING. (Chicago Tribune.) "What an exasperating old cuss Hewlett is in the matter of borrowing money." "Why, I thought he was well fixed. I didn't suppose he ever had occasion to borrow any."

"Great Scott! He doesn't. What I mean is that he's exasperating to get turned down every time you try to borrow from him."

Carload of Autos Arrives. A carload of Jackson automobiles were received yesterday by the local agents, Raymond & Bracken, and were unloaded during the day. These machines are of the very newest, latest models, and attracted considerable attention during the day.

IN SYMPHONY CONCERT

Mrs. Helen Shearman Gue.

She will sing tonight with the Symphony orchestra at the Orpheum. In a recent comment on Mrs. Gue's singing the Musical Courier says:

"Mrs. Gue gave great pleasure through her singing, rare in vocal work. Beauty of tone production, enunciation, expression of true character, and refinement of personality contribute to make an ensemble unusual in value."

LISBON, PORTUGAL, THE SCENE OF FOUL MURDER

and reach for his throat, then to drop back on the cushions. The crowd prince almost simultaneously was seen to collapse and fall toward the side of the carriage, while the queen, driven to a frenzy, was seeking to save the crown prince and the infant Manuel by shielding them with her body.

Mingled Rage and Fear. A great hush fell upon the crowd which for the moment did not comprehend that a swift tragedy had befallen the nation. Then loud cries of anger burst forth, coupled with the shrieks of women and screams of frightened children, and the commotion and the roar of the populace suddenly thrown into rage and fear.

Near the royal carriage a small group of silent men had quietly awaited its approach. Then at a muttered word from one of them they swiftly threw back their cloaks across their shoulders and raised their carbines, while the cloaks had concealed, and quickly fired again and again in the direction of the royal family. It seemed as though a score of shots were fired, and in an instant, and before the startled onlookers could move, the men had turned and were madly fighting their way through the crowd in an effort to reach an open space and make their escape.

Two Regicides Killed. It was upon this scene that the multitude looked when quick sounding shots had told of violence. The royal escort instantly galloped in the direction of the assassins and pursued them down the street, firing repeatedly and bringing to the earth two of the regicides, ridding them with bullets. The other two were wounded.

TORN AND DISTRACTED.

Portugal in Upheaval Over Iron Rule of Premier Bland.

Carlos I. was born Sept. 23, 1863, the son of King Luiz I. and his queen, Maria Pia. He married Marie Amelie, daughter of Philippe, Duc d'Orleans, on May 22, 1886. He succeeded to the throne Oct. 19, 1889.

The crown prince, Luiz Philippe, Duke of Braganza, was born March 21, 1887.

While there had been considerable discussion throughout the city, on the surface the city tonight appeared to be calm, the silence that prevailed being remarkable and there was hardly a sign of life. The square surrounding the naval arsenal, however, the town hall and the Bank of Portugal are occupied by troops.

Reform Obstructed. The crisis in the political situation arose from the fact that the cabinet, which represented exclusively the new liberal group, found its program of reform obstructed by both the old conservative and progressive parties, and decided to ask for the dissolution of parliament in order to bring about the promulgation of a number of measures by means of decrees. The cabinet was of the opinion that thus having established its determination radically to reorganize the affairs of the country it could appeal with the fullest confidence to the people in a general election. The opposition attacked the king for dissolving parliament, declaring that to be an unconstitutional act.

Senator Franco, the premier, published a decree dissolving the chamber, and stated that after seven months of parliamentary strife he had found it impossible to govern with a parliament that carried out his executive and legislative program, which included a policy of social and economic reforms, and efficient party control of the administration. In this he established a veritable dictatorship, and since then has governed with an iron hand.

Reports emanating from many parts of Portugal and through Madrid in Spain, within the last few months have indicated that trouble was brewing for Portugal, and that revolutionists were at work. After numerous minor risings had been put down, the police, on Jan. 23, came upon a widespread plot to overthrow the monarchy and proclaim Portugal a republic. The plot was organized by a small group of advanced republicans, and the original intention was to assassinate Premier Franco, and depend upon the secret, republican and labor organizations, armed with bombs and revolvers, to complete the work of revolution in the country.

Revolutionists Arrested. But the police raided the meeting place of the conspirators and made a number of arrests, seizing quantities of bombs and other weapons, and since then other raids have been made in Lisbon, with the result that the police believed they had the revolutionaries well in hand. Each day, however, brought new evidences of the ramifications of the plot to remove the heads of the state.

A treaty with England, however, not only provides for assistance from that country in event of foreign invasion of Portugal, but also provides for the safeguarding of the crown against demonstrations from revolutionists.

Pretender to Throne. Dom Miguel d'Braganza, head of the house of the line of Braganza, which formerly reigned over Portugal, the pretender to the throne, is apt to come to the front again because of the death of King Carlos and the crown prince. The father of Dom Miguel was the late King Miguel I, Duke of Braganza, who seized the throne from his niece, Queen Maria II, daughter of Emperor Pedro II of Brazil, and was driven into Portugal from 1826 to 1834, at which latter date Queen Maria was restored to the throne. There have been numerous rumors of a rebellion with the object of placing Dom Miguel on the throne, but recently these were not given serious consideration.

Last June Dom Miguel, through the medium of the newspapers of Vienna, announced his readiness to fill any vacancy in the Portuguese throne arising from the dispute in that country.

Republican Opportunity. It was long ago stated that the result of the political crises in Portugal might not only determine whether a new and better order of administration would prevail, but whether monarchial rule should not give way to a republic. The republicans, however, believe that Franco, by exposing the practices of the monarchist parties, administered a severe blow to the prestige of the king and the monarchy from which they could never recover, and had made a republic a probability.

The republicans had Franco's avowal that the country for years had been the theatre of the monarchist parties with the sole object of distributing graft to their "clients," the scandal of the advances made secretly from the public treasury to the royal family and an admission of the arbitrary manner in which the republicans have been illiquidated by decree.

No one, however, was more severe in his criticism of the practice of advancing money to the royal family than Franco himself, and he placed himself to make it impossible in the future for the king to obtain anything beyond the royal allowance and to introduce a system of public accountability that would reveal the destination of every dollar that left the treasury.

Premier Kept His Promise.

He kept his promise, but he had also taken the back of the king, which amounted to a large sum and which he liquidated by decree.

Premier Franco promised also to hold the elections at an early date if conditions in the country would permit, but the recent revolutionary tactics of the opposition led him within the last month to take repressive measures and to set aside for the present at least all thought of holding the elections.

Former Attempts on King's Life. In April, 1893, an attempt was made on King Carlos' life as he was being driven through Lisbon, but it met with complete failure.

On Jan. 19, 1896, an artist made an attempt on the king's life while the latter was retiring from the palace in an open carriage for a drive. The artist threw a heavy stone which narrowly missed the king's head, but hit the aide-de-camp riding with him, injuring him severely.

On her return from a visit to London early in December, Queen Amelie took back a letter to King Carlos from King Edward in which the British king gave it as his opinion that the dictatorship endangered the crown and recommended a return to the constitution.

LAST OFFICIAL ACT. Decree Giving Cabinet Power to Repress Revolutionary Agitation.

Lisbon, Feb. 1.—A decree was gazetted today giving the cabinet unlimited power to repress revolutionary agitation on the lines of the bill recently introduced in the Spanish cortes, but it is more sweeping and arbitrary.

It empowers the cabinet to expel from the kingdom or exile to the colonies members of all associations that are deemed inimical to the state or that are conducting a campaign against public security; it suspends parliamentary immunity; it compares all persons suspected of political activities to criminals, and deprives them of their civil rights, titles, decorations, etc. The decree is retroactive to Jan. 21.

The decree provides that suspects shall be taken into custody within two days. No appeal from the first sentence passed will be entertained.

BADLY BEATEN AND ROBBED

Laborer From Montana Receives Rough Treatment From Trio of Highwaymen.

Highwaymen ambushed Charles Jensen, a laborer from Dillon, Mont., on Lincoln avenue, late Friday night, and, after robbing him of $30 in money, they left him lying where they struck him down and made their escape. To prevent their victim from calling for aid the three men who committed the crime stuffed rags into his mouth until he was nearly choked.

Jensen reached the city Friday evening from the north on his way to Nevada, where he was bound in search of employment. During his stay here he started out to view the city. While walking along Lincoln avenue near Twenty-fifth street, three men approached him from behind and before he suspected anything wrong he received a stunning blow over the left eye. The three men then stepped upon him and in an instant a rag was placed in his mouth. Every time Jensen moved the rag was viciously yanked, and he received additional blows over the head. Two of the robbers searched him and found the money, which they divided among themselves. The third man finished all three escaped in the darkness.

Just how long Jensen remained on the ground he does not know. He is now in the hospital, but has no sense of direction and started for a light which he saw in the railroad yards. When he regained his senses he was in the Southern Pacific roundhouse. In a rambling manner he told his story to the employees who summoned the patrol wagon, and he was taken to the city jail.

The police instituted a vigorous search throughout the rest of the night, but were unable to locate anyone whom they could charge with the crime. Jensen was able to describe only the three who stuffed the rags in his mouth. Of the other two he only secured glimpses and consequently was unable to give any description of them.

At the jail yesterday morning Jensen received medical attention. His left eye was swollen shut, his forehead bruised and cut, and his face was scratched, discolored and swollen.

The police are of the opinion that the work was that of professionals.

To Be Headquarters and Distributing Center for Forestry Stations.

Ogden has been selected by Chief C. S. Chapman, forest reserve operations in the United States, as headquarters and distributing center for 160 branch stations between the Indian Territory and the Pacific coast. Mr. Chapman has obtained a ten-year lease on the warehouse of the Simmons Hardware company of Wall avenue, which will be ready for occupancy in about sixty days.

Mr. Chapman has been in Ogden some days in connection with the matter and has been aided by Ogden people in carrying out his plans. It is stated that 35 per cent of the forest reserve work of the Missouri river and that most of the business that will be done through the branch will concern the western country. When necessary, however, supplies will be shipped to both the east and west.

To Deal With Swine Plague.

In connection with the swine plague that has become epidemic in the western part of Weber county during the past week or so, Secretary T. B. Beatty of the board of health has issued a communication to the Weber county commissioners in which a number of recommendations are given as to the manner in which the disease should be handled.

The letter follows: Dr. H. J. Fredericks, professor of veterinary science at the Logan college, that swine plague is the same in different parts of Weber county, at North Ogden, Pleasant View, Steterville, etc. This disease is exceedingly contagious and fatal and every effort should be made to promptly stamp it out. All infected animals should be discovered and destroyed, and infected places should be isolated and quarantined.

It is recommended that a veterinary surgeon be employed to make a thorough investigation and that deputy sheriffs be authorized to cause the destruction of infected animals and the enforcement of proper precautionary measures.
